

Welcome to North Mitaka

On the north side of Mitaka Station is a concentration of government offices to support residents' lives, and culture and sports facilities available to all, young and old alike. The area boasts many spots for relaxation and strolls, including Tokyo Municipal Musashino Chuo Park and Tamagawa Josui Canal. Here you can spend a leisurely time, relaxing as you please.

The area is also known as the past home of Nakajima Aircraft Company. Founded in 1917 by Chikuhai Nakajima, the company was one of the leading Japanese companies in the military aircraft industry prior to Japan's defeat. Between 1938 and 1945, the company produced engines in factories that spanned a vast area from the current Midoricho to Yahatacho in Musashino.

Best Spots

Musashino Chuo Park

Musashino Chuo Park is located nearly in the center of Musashino. The site had been used for military factories before the war and for U.S. military housing afterward, but was eventually reborn as a park through the longstanding wishes of local residents. It is now a place for relaxation of all kinds, centered on its large open field and its sports grounds.

Tamagawa Josui Canal

This aqueduct was built in 1653 over a length of 43 km from the modern Tokyo city of Hamura to Yotsuya in Shinjuku Ward, to supply drinking water throughout Edo (the old name of Tokyo). Even now, a portion of the aqueduct is operated by the Tokyo Metropolitan Government Bureau of Waterworks as a waterworks facility. A pedestrian walkway runs alongside the aqueduct, letting people enjoy the murmur of running water as they enjoy strolls among green trees.

Cherry Tree Row (Chuo-dori)

This outstanding row of cherry trees runs from near the intersection of Chuo-dori and Itsukaichi-kaido Avenue to the intersection of Shiritu Daiyon Junior High School, and along the street to the north of City Hall. When in full bloom, the trees appear to form a spectacular tunnel of blossoms. A Cherry Blossom Festival is held on the first Sunday of every April.

Green Park Path

This path, running along Tamagawa Josui Canal on the east side of the Sakai Purification Plant and up to the main entrance of Chuo Park, was built on the remnants of the former Japanese National Railways Musashino Stadium Line (from Mitaka Station to near the entrance of Musashino Chuo Park). Visitors can enjoy the changes of nature through the seasons on their walks.

Welcome to Musashisakai

With the completion of a project for raised intersections at railway crossings, the area around the newly connected north and south areas of the station is undergoing development and has greatly changed. The impact of multiple universities and cultural facilities is spurring the location's evolution into an area for learning, where cultural and academic activities flourish in many domains. The surrounding residential neighborhoods have expanded, bordering Koganei Park to the west.

Best Spots and Public Facilities

Agriculture Fureai Park 0-1
This new, urban-style park brings agriculture into a park space. Local citizens conduct hands-on agricultural experiences and events in the park, which also features a relocated and restored nagayamon building thought to date back to the late Edo Period.

Furuse Park 0-2
This atmospheric Japanese-style park is thickly covered with pine and cherry trees around its pond. Visitors can enjoy Shoroon, an authentic tearoom reconstructed from the summer home of the Furuse family built at the start of the Showa Era. The room is used now for sado (tea ceremony), kafo (flower arrangement), kukai (haiku poetry gatherings), and more.

Kizuki Taisha Shrine 0-4
In the early Edo period, Matsudaira Naomasa, who maintained a daimyo summer residence on the site, built Kizuki-Taisha Shrine (currently Izumo-Taisha Shrine). Dedicated to the gods Daikokuken and Ebisu, this is a shrine of good fortune and matchmaking.

Doppo-no-Mori Forest (Sakaianya Green Area) 0-1 0-2
This park offers one of the few remaining scenes of thick coppices within the city. With its connections to the novel Musashino by Meiji Period literary master Doppo Kunikida, the southern half of the park is known to locals as "Doppo-no-Mori" (Doppo Forest).

Kannon-in Temple 0-3
Matsudaira Naomasa built this temple to Kannon at his daimyo summer residence. It later became a temple of the Soto sect. Visitors can experience Zen meditation at the temple.

Musashino Swing Hall 0-3
This concert hall is fully soundproofed by a dual structure. The multi-purpose room is perfect for dances and reception. Conference rooms that can be used as exhibition spaces are also available.

Musashino Furusato History Museum 0-3
This museum features an exhibition room where visitors can learn about the history of Musashino, as well as exhibit rooms for themed exhibits, a "citizens' space" which can be used for historic and cultural educational activities, and collection rooms for the storage and preservation of historic official documents, folk materials, and other valuable items.

Musashino Place 0-3
This multi-functional facility houses a library, a cafe, and functions to support lifelong learning, citizens' activities, and youth activities. In 2016, it received an award from the Architectural Institute of Japan.

QuOLA Musashisakai Civic Center 0-3
The 1st floor of this center houses a cafe, pharmacy, pediatric clinic, and internal medical clinic. The 2nd floor is a complex facility with a civic center, gymnastics classroom for children and senior citizens, and more. The rooftop is available for holding barbecues.
