Grave of Isami Kondo G-6

7-8-10 Takinogawa, Kita City
Shinsen-gumi commander Isami Kondo was captured in Nagareyama in 1868, sent to the headquarters of the new governmental army which was in Itabashi-shuku at that time, and later executed. His grave is near that site, which is currently at the front of the East exit of Itabashi Station.

Kaga Park G-5

1-8 Kaga
During the Edo period, this area used to be the residence of the Maeda family of Kaga, which was as large as 177 acres. The park is the ruin of the artificial hill. From the Meiji era to the end of WWII, there used to be the Itabashi Explosives Factory (Tokyo Second Army Arsenal) building.

Tokoiji Temple G-5

4-13-8 Itabashi
A Jodo Buddhist Temple that is said to have been established in the Muromachi period (14th-16th century). The Koshin Tower in the premises is the largest in Itabashi standing 190cm (6'3") tall, and is designated the tangible cultural property of Itabashi. There is also memorial tower of feudal warlord Ukita Hideie, built by his descendants who had moved to Itabashi in the Meiji era.

Itabashi Bridge F-5

28/29 Honcho
A bridge over Shakujii River, near Nakajuku of the old Nakasendo. It is said to be the origin of the city name "Itabashi". The name is seen in literature such as the Engyo edition of "The Tale of the Heike", and is thought to have become a place name by the Kamakura period. When the cherry blossom viewing season arrives, the Shakujii River sees the full bloom of cherry blossoms from upper through to lower streams.

Enkiriienoki F-4

18 Honcho
Enkiriienoki has been a renowned scenic spot of Itabashi-shuku since the Edo period. It has been told that the tree "cuts bad ties and form good connection", attracting faith from ordinary people.

Itago Kometen G-5

40-1 Nakajuku
An earthen-wall building that has quietly stood on Nakajuku Shopping Street since 1914. The architecture features a bricked, Western-style design added to the early modern tradesman's house, creating a late modern feel. In recent years, instead of being operated as a rice retail shop, the place is used as the place to convey the atmosphere of a post station to future generations.

Kutsuwa Jinja Shrine F-5

46-3 Nakacho
In the Edo period, this place was called "Kutsuwa Gongen". The origin of the name is said to have come from an anecdote that when Tokugawa Ieyasu toured around his domain countries, he let his horses rest and recover from fatigue here and left the curb (kutsuwa) behind, which was later enshrined, or because a horseshoe was enshrined here. The deity is a guardian for children and is worshipped for its ability to cure diseases, especially whooping coughs.

Site of Moro D-5

5-17 Komone
In March 1951, stone tools and other artifacts were discovered in the cross-sectional part of a road that runs through an independent hill called "Osedoyama". Later, the result of an excavation suggested that the culture of the Old Stone Age, which is older than the Jomon era, had prevailed ubiquitously in Japan. In addition, the knife-shaped stone tool unearthed during this excavation was named "Moro-type knife-shaped stone tool" from its highly unique form. The site was designated Tokyo's cultural property in 1969 and the artifacts in 1999. Today the site is a parkland owned by the Tokyo Metropolitan government but is off-limits to save the trees and woods.

Geto Bridge and Rokuzo-no-hokora

E-5

52-1 Yayoicho/1 Minami-tokiwadai
There are a few stories about the origin of the name "Geto" (head down). One is that there was an "upside-down nettle tree" which grew big from a nettle cane that a traveling monk had stuck down to the ground. Another is that when the lord of Kawagoe Castle went to Edo and back, the retainers of his Edo residence came here and bowed their head down to greet him or see him off. And the third story is that the stone bridge was rebuilt based on the money of Rokuzo, who used to receive donation from the travelers under the bridge. The Rokuzo-no-hokora was rebuilt to praise his virtue, and houses a "wood strip" donated by Shibusawa Eiichi.

Gohon Keyaki (Five Zelkova Trees) D-4

1-19 Kami-itabashi
When the width of Kawagoe-kaido was expanded in the early Showa era, Iijima Yajuro, then mayor of the former Kami-Itabashi Village, offered his land under the condition to keep some of the zelkova trees in his homestead woodland. Thus five trees were preserved when the woodland was cut down, and people begin to call them "gohon keyaki" (five zelkova trees). Later, two dead trees were replaced to new ones. Today the site is a local landmark.

Sakuragawa Green Road D-4

Sakuragawa Boundary of 1 and 3-chome
A green road that was constructed by turning the Sakura River (which is called Tagara River in Nerima City) into underground drains. With many trees planted, it is a place of relaxation for the community.

Itabashi Science and Education Hall E-4

4-14-1 Tokiwadai
Enjoy the planetarium and the scientific exhibition room while enriching the interest and understanding in science and space. The planetarium offers views of seasonal starry skies.

How to choose your pair of shoes

Materials	Light and breathable
Toes	Have ample room to move your toes
Arches of the feet	Supported by insoles
Insteps	Not pinching, adjustable with laces
Soles	Pliable to body moves Thick and cushioned
Heels	Securely wrap the heels

How to wear your shoes right

1. Make room in the shoes that allows you to move your toes.
2. Hit the ground lightly with your heels. When your heels settle in the right place, tie the laces at your ankles.
3. Shift your weight to the toes. Lift your heels and secure the shoes tightly with the laces.

Area scattered with historical sites and remains along the cliff line that remind of the time when there were ample spring water. Also has the dimension of an industrial area.

Weeping Cherry Trees in Nanzoin Temple

F-3

48-8 Hasunumacho
A Shingon Buddhism temple that is said to have been established in the early Edo period, and was a rest station for 8th shogun Yoshimune during falconry. The premises feature a Koshin Tower in the shape of a round-sculpture jizo (guardian deity) built in 1653 by a group of Koshin-machi (religious event) participants. The weeping cherry trees that bloom beautifully with the Fudo-do hall in the background offers a spectacular view in the blooming season.

Main Pillar of Toda Bridge

F-3

3-8 Azusawa
The main pillar of the Tokyo side of the river before the bridge was replaced by the current Toda Bridge in 1978. The left back side of the pillar has an embedded copper plate that states the history and specifications of the bridge. The main pillar of the Saitama side is at the entrance of Todabashi Water Park on the east side of Boat Race Toda.

Mitsugi Park

E-3

4-59-1 Maenocho
Opened in April 1953, about 45% of the park's 14,000 square meter-premise is a pond where you can enjoy rowing boats. With its natural spring water, Mitsugi Park is the place to spend laid-back time.

Yakushi-no-izumi Garden

E-3

3-7-20 Azusawa
When the 8th Shogun Yoshimune stopped by at Daizenji Temple, he named the Bhaishajyaguru statue "Shimizu-Yakushi (clear water Bhaishajyaguru)" after seeing the clear water spring in the premises. Based on information, the garden was restored to the state back then.

Azusawa Water Bus Dock

F-2

4-28 Azusawa
In the olden days, this place was called "Azusawa Kashi" (riverfront) and was busy as the key point of boat transportation where various goods were loaded and unloaded. Today the place has been constructed into Azusawa Water Bus Dock and used as a wharf of "Tokyo Mizube Line", a water bus line that connects Sumida and Arakawa Rivers and the bayfront area.

Shimura Milestone

F-3

1-12 Shimura/2-16 Azusawa
The third milestone from Nihombashi, the heart of Edo. Being one of the only two milestones that remain to this day with the original appearance, it is designated the national place of historic interest.

Shimizuzaka Slope

E-3

2-7 Shimura Vicinity
The first rough path of the Old Nakasendo, this steep hill falls from the Shimura plateau to the lowlands of the Arakawa River basin. It is said that the big curve used to be a scenic spot where you could have a commanding view of Mt. Fuji on the right hand side. The name comes from Daizenji Temple on the right hand side of the road when you go down the slope, where the 8th Shogun Yoshimune stopped by for a break during falconry and named its Bhaishajyaguru statue "Shimizu-Yakushi (clear water Bhaishajyaguru)", after seeing the beautiful clear water spring in the premises. Later, people started calling this slope "Shimizuzaka" as well.

Walking

Warming up

Do stretches to gradually warm your body up and encourage blood circulation. Make sure you do this in order to prevent injury, knee pain, and fatigue.

* Do not try too hard if you haven't slept much or do not feel well.

Make your walking effective with good posture!

Chin down; eyes forward.
Breathe naturally, keeping pace with the walking tempo.

Land from your heels.

Swing your arms rhythmically along with your steps.

Back straight; chest out

Kick the ground with the base of your big toe.

Make your stride about 5-7cm bigger than usual.

Guideline of suitable walking speed
Faster than usual but not hard.

Cooling down after walking

Abrupt stopping of exercise will strain your heart. It is important to stop gradually; it allows you to recover from fatigue fast and prevents muscle pain.

Don't forget to replenish water

Area around Akatsuka Tameike Park B-2

5-35-27 Akatsuka
Approx. 150 plum trees are in a park; the full bloom in early spring is something to see. The park is surrounded by Itabashi Historical Museum, Itabashi Art Museum, and Tokyo Metropolitan Akatsuka Park, where you can spend laid-back time.

Jorenji Temple B-2 (Great Buddha of Tokyo)

5-28-3 Akatsuka
Jorenji is a Jodo Buddhism temple which is said to have been established in the Oei period (1394-1428). Located in Itabashi-shuku of the Old Nakasendo, it was the place where the successive Tokugawa shoguns enjoyed "Otaka-gari" (falconry) and also famous as the temple of "Enma-sama" (Yama). The 13-meter bronze sitting Amitabha Buddha statue called "The Great Buddha of Tokyo" was erected in 1977 with the hope of no natural disasters and wars. The various stone figures on the premise such as the "Gaman no Oni", which used to be at the former Todo family's Somei residence, are also something to see.

Takenoko Park B-2

12-2 Daimon
The existing bamboo grove was augmented into a park with the addition of about 13 bamboo species such as fern-leaf hedge and giant timber bamboos. Listening to the sound of the breeze that shakes the bamboo leaves makes you forget the passage of time.

Shogetsuin Temple B-2

8-4-9 Akatsuka
A Soto Buddhism temple that is said to have been reestablished by Yoritane Chiba by donating a temple estate in 1492. It is also famous as the base where Shuhan Takashima conducted the Western-style cannon shooting training for the first time in Japan. The monument "Takashima Shuho Kiko-hi" in the premises is in the shape of a cannon barrel and cannons.

Water Wheel Park and Tokusuitei C-3

1-17-12 Yotsuba
A waterwheel runs in the park where, at the rice paddy field, you can observe the agricultural scene and the process of rice cultivation from transplanting to reaping. Across the street next to the Water Wheel Park is a traditional Japanese-style garden and tea ceremony room "Tokusuitei".

* Advance reservation required for Tokusuitei.

Ruins of the Akatsuka Castle B-2

5-35 Akatsuka
The site used to be the Chiba clan's residential castle during the Warring States period. It was a typical flatland-mountain castle of the Medieval times; the scarce ruins of the dry moats remind you of the bygone era.

Walk 10 minutes more!

"Walking" is an exercise you can do casually. The national guideline for the target daily walking steps is 8,000 steps⁽¹⁾. However, only around 50% of residents in Tokyo of age 20 and up, men and women alike, actually walk 8,000 steps or more a day⁽²⁾. Walking 1,000 steps/about 10 minutes more a day will help you overcome physical laziness as well as prevent lifestyle diseases and reduce stress.

*1 MHLW's "Active Guide for Health" recommends men/women of age 18-64 to have physical activities that account for 8,000 walking steps a day.

*2 "National Health & Nutrition Survey" (MHLW) (Recount of Tokyoite's data 2016-18)

(Admission free-of-charge / open on Sat./Sun./Holidays)

Itabashi Botanical Gardens

D-1

8-29-2 Takashimadaira
A botanical garden that sterically recreates the natural environment of Southeast Asia. The glasshouse where mangroves etc. grow uses the residual heat from the nearby Itabashi Incineration Plant; the cold room showcases plants such as orchids. There is also a mini aquarium on the basement and the facility allows you to enjoy all tropical environments from sea to mountain.

Takashimadaira Housing Complex and Line of Zelkova Trees

C-2

The Takashimadaira area used to be a swamp named Tokumarugahara; today's scenery was created when housing complexes were made between the late 60s and early 70s. The rows of zelkova trees that extend over about 600m grow with the housing complexes and shows us the seasonal beauty.

Children's Zoo Takashimadaira Branch

Tokyo Metropolitan Ukima Park

2-1 Funado E-1
A park with a big windmill as a landmark. It houses a square, playground equipment, a primrose field, and an aquatic botanical garden. Enjoy sport, plant appreciation, fishing, and many other activities.

Former Kasuya Family House

7-11 Tokumaru C-3
An old private residence from the mid-Edo period. The main building is a wooden single-story house with a thatched hip roof. The renovation starting in 2015 revealed the fact that it was one of the oldest private residence in Tokyo, built in 1723. It still stands at the same place where it was first built; thus it draws attraction as one of the precious buildings in eastern Japan. It was designated the tangible cultural property of Tokyo in 2018. In order to preserve the precious cultural property, the former Kasuya Family House now has a fire monitor as a fire prevention equipment, as well as bicycle and car parking lots for the visitors. The place is used by the community for recreation and local performing arts.

Ta-asobi (Akatsuka/Tokumaru)

"Ta-asobi", a tradition of Tokumaru and Akatsuka districts where used to be a vast rice paddy field, is a pre-celebration festival held at the start of the year in hope for the year's productiveness of grain and prosperity of the family. In 1976 "The Ta-asobi of Itabashi" was designated the national important intangible folk cultural property. Today, The Tokumaru Kitano Jinja Shrine holds the festival on February 11, and Akatsuka Suwa Jinja Shrine in the night of February 13.

Itabashi Fireworks Festival

The summer tradition dubbed Itabashi's pride. Along with Toda City, Saitama Prefecture at the other side of Arakawa river, approx. 12,000 shots of fireworks paint the night sky. Every year there are many spectacular and various fireworks such as the shooting of the biggest firework ball, and "The Great Niagara Falls", which is one of the longest in the Kanto region. Because the shooting place is close to the spectators' area, they can also enjoy the sound resonating to their stomachs.

Tokyo Metropolitan Akatsuka Park

A park built from the cliff of the Akatsuka plateau. This long and narrow park stretching east to west looks like a little forest with many different sizes of trees. The Daimon district within the park has the largest natural habitat of windflowers in Tokyo.

Itabashi This and That

Our initiatives and what to enjoy in
"Itabashi, The City of Picture Books"

Itabashi City takes advantage of its friendship-city relationship and exchanges with Bologna, Italy, and many printing industry firms to disseminate the culture of picture books as a brand unique to Itabashi.

1 Getting in touch with picture books from around the world

Itabashi Bologna Children's Picture Book Library (1st floor, Chuo Library [E-4]) is the place where everyone from child to adult can enjoy, with arrays of picture books from around the world. Through picture books, you can expand your interest and curiosity on the world as well as read them in different languages. In addition, the annual summer event "Bologna Book Fair in Itabashi" offers you the opportunities to enjoy picture books that draw international attention.

2 Bologna Illustrators Exhibition

An exhibition of works selected for the picture book illustrators' competition in Bologna, Italy, held in Itabashi annually at the Itabashi Art Museum [B-2]. By being exposed to the precious original artwork, you will be introduced to various forms of expressions and techniques in picture books.

3 Picture book reading events

Picture book reading events are held mainly at libraries and CAP's (children's houses). It is not a mere place of enjoyment; children are expected to nurture imagination by getting familiar with picture books at an early age.
