Spend joyful moments in Tokyo—a city that offers an abundance of night views with all kinds of lights.

Tokyo is a city where you can find every kind of light that Japan has to offer: the sweeping, panoramic views from towering structures such as TOKYO SKYTREE®; the nighttime views of the bay area such as Odaiba and Toyosu; the lights of Rainbow Bridge and the bridges that span the Sumida River; the blinding orange lights of the piers that can be seen on a night cruise of Tokyo Bay; and the night views that reflect the beauty of each season, such as the cherry blossom illuminations and fireworks shows. The city also hosts a number of light shows and illumination events—Tokyo is truly a “city that never sleeps.” Tokyo’s most representative night views are all covered in this booklet. By visiting these places, I’m sure you’ll find yourself enjoying the night so much that you won’t want to sleep.

History

The symbol of Asakusa and a visitor magnet

① Senso-ji Temple

浅草寺

This temple is Asakusa's main attraction, bringing in more than 30 million visitors every year. The Hozo-mon Gate, Five-Story Pagoda, and Main Hall are illuminated at night, creating an even more majestic atmosphere. The Kaminari-mon Gate, with its giant red lantern and statues of Fujin (the god of wind) and Raijin (the god of thunder), is also a must-see!

An old Tokyo district whose history and sophistication draw people from afar

Asakusa

Asakusa, famous for the Senso-ji Temple, whose history goes back about 1,400 years, is one of Japan's top tourist destinations. This area was once a center of entertainment and still retains traces of the sophisticated spirit and lifestyle of those days.

A bustling shopping street that has remained unchanged since the Edo period

② Nakamise Shopping Street

仲見世通り

About 250 meters long, the front approach to Senso-ji Temple is lined with vermilion-lacquered shops. These shops offer a variety of souvenirs and snacks, such as Asakusa's famous kaminari-okoshi (puffed rice snacks) and ningyo-yaki (bite-sized cakes with fillings), as well as various Japanese artisanal goods and traditional crafts. At night, the shutters of the storefronts are lit up, revealing murals known as the Asakusa Emaki picture scrolls (see P34).

Look out over the Asakusa area from a building designed by a famous architect

③ Asakusa Culture Tourist Information Center

浅草文化観光センター

The tourist information center located in front of the Kaminari-mon Gate. Take in the view of the lit-up Senso-ji Temple and TOKYO SKYTREE from the free observation deck. Designed by Kengo Kuma, the building's unique facade looks like a stack of wooden houses.

Backstreet pubs for adults: Once you're hooked, there's no turning back! “Yokocho” labyrinths

Located just off the main street, yokocho are narrow alleyways packed with pubs and bars and filled with an old-timey ambience. Once you venture into a side street crammed with cozy eateries, you'll never look back!

Feels like a blast to the past

Akabane OK Yokocho

赤羽 OK 横丁

The Akabane district is said to be a mecca for drinkers. OK Yokocho is a bar area located off Akabane Ichibangai, a shopping street in front of the station. This narrow alleyway is home to nearly 30 old and new establishments, including izakaya, “snack bars,” and wine bars.

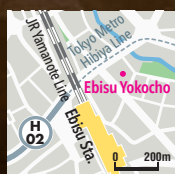

Neo-pubs where young people gather

Ebisu Yokocho

恵比寿横丁

Just a two-minute walk from Ebisu Station, Ebisu Yokocho is home to 19 gastropubs specializing in kushiyaki, Kyoto-style oden, okonomiyaki, and more, each with a floor space of only 10 to 16 m². The close proximity creates a lively, cozy atmosphere where conversations happen naturally.

Summer

Season: Early June to mid-August

Fireworks and festivals

Fireworks bursting in the night sky and matsuri (festivals) bustling with energetic music and food stalls are the hallmarks of summer in Japan. Vibrant lights and sounds will color your memories of these special nights.

One of the most iconic fireworks festivals in Tokyo

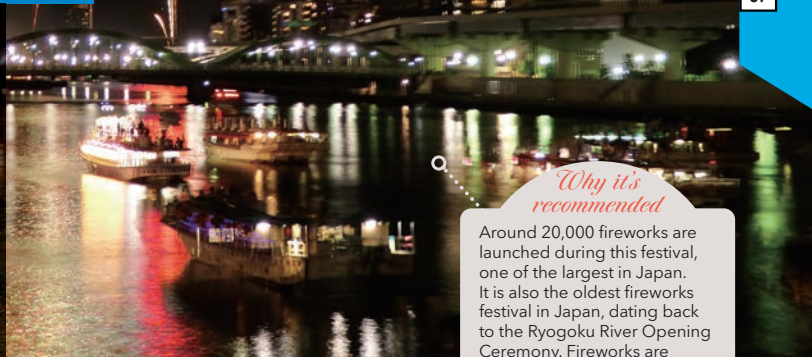

Sumida River Fireworks Festival

隅田川花火大会

A historically significant fireworks festival that attracts nearly one million people each year. The highlight is the fireworks competition, where local pyrotechnic companies with ties to Ryogoku compete with the top companies in Japan.

● Venue 1: Between Sakura-bashi Bridge and Kototoi Bridge (15-min. walk from Tokyo Metro / Toei Subway Asakusa Sta.)

● Venue 2: Between Komagata Bridge and Umayu Bridge (5-min. walk from Toei Subway Kuramae Sta.)

Why it's recommended

Around 20,000 fireworks are launched during this festival, one of the largest in Japan. It is also the oldest fireworks festival in Japan, dating back to the Ryogoku River Opening Ceremony. Fireworks are launched from two venues, and the sheer scale of the display is astounding.
